High Functioning is a new documentary film about the Israeli Autistic Community and culture. Filmed in Israel and England, the film is mostly in Hebrew with English subtitles.

Synopsis: Dana is the mother of Tamara, a charming, high-functioning autistic 8-year-old girl. Dana is unsatisfied with the solutions offered to her by the medical world and is looking for an alternative. In her searches she meets some members of ACI - Autistic Community of Israel. This captivating activist group raises awareness to make the public understand autism is not a disability, but an identity. Members of the group take Dana on a wonderful journey within their world—a journey which will change everything she has known about autism and about herself.

The mission of Jewish Disability Awareness and Inclusion Month is to unite Jewish communities worldwide to raise awareness and champion the rights of all Jews to be included and to participate in all aspects of Jewish life like anyone else.
